About the Symposium

Today, information is regarded as important resources for any development activity. It is now recognized as a key component of strategic planning and decision making. Recent technical advances in computing and communications are revolutionizing the way people need, seek, and use information. The advances in computers and modern communication technologies have made possible instantaneous access to the needed information. The changing new dimensions and directions of ICTs have brought in paradigm shift the electronic resources.. Electronic and web resources play a crucial role in teaching, learning, research and extension activities of the institutions and organizations. The impact of web 2.0, library consortia, OAI, Knowledge Management, E-learning on library and information centres is being widely discussed by Library and information Science professionals. Therefore, Mysore University Library association with Society for Information (SIS) Bangalore Chapter plans to organize a symposium focusing on how well Library and Information Science practice and research corresponds with changes in today's landscape of knowledge society.
